

Transit Improvement Plan to Connect Baltimore

BALTIMORE

Where You Want to Go

Bus Stop Signage and Map Improvements

As part of the BaltimoreLink System, new bus stop signage and maps will be developed. The design of the new material will be:

- Legible: In order to be clear and easy to understand, MTA's bus stop signs and maps will be designed to highlight and promote the most important information for each stop.
- Accessible: By pairing each bus stop sign with an information placard, MTA's extensive bus system will be greatly simplified for the casual user. Information placards could display additional route information, such as major stops, headway details, span of service, and fare information.
- Charming: The new design of the bus stops will be visually appealing and simple.

Potential Bus Stop Types

Basic Stop

A stop featuring only the bus flag sign on a pole. Appropriate for stops with fewer than 10 boardings a day.

Typical Stop

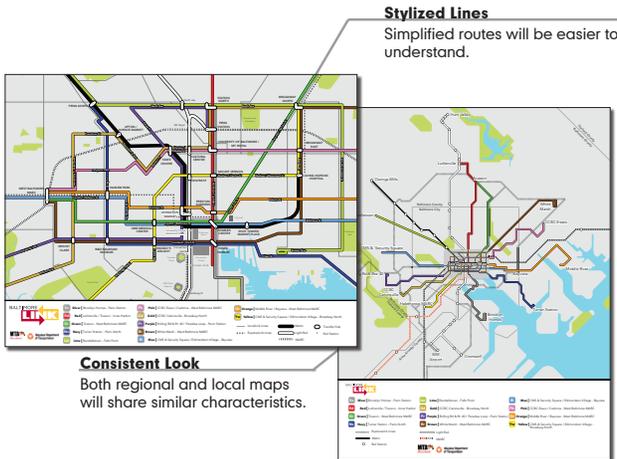

A stop featuring a basic flag sign and information placard. Appropriate for stops with more than 10 boardings a day.

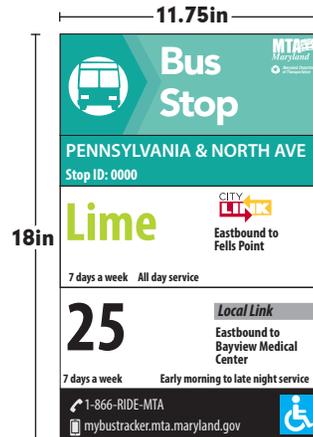

Pylon Stop

A stop featuring a larger information display and local area map. A route map and information panel can be displayed nearby as a stand-alone sign panel or within a bus shelter. These stops are most appropriate in high ridership locations (more than 100 boardings a day) or in places with many connecting routes.

Example System Maps

Possible Bus Stop Sign

Bus Stop Logo
Makes bus stop locations easy to identify.

CityLink
High frequency service is signified by distinct and highly visible branding.

Handicap Symbol
Identifies stop as fully ADA accessible.

Example Information Placard

Bus Frequency Information
Tells how frequently a bus arrives at different times and days.

Basic Route Diagram
Provides riders a way to quickly determine where a route goes. The diagram shows the location connecting MTA service.

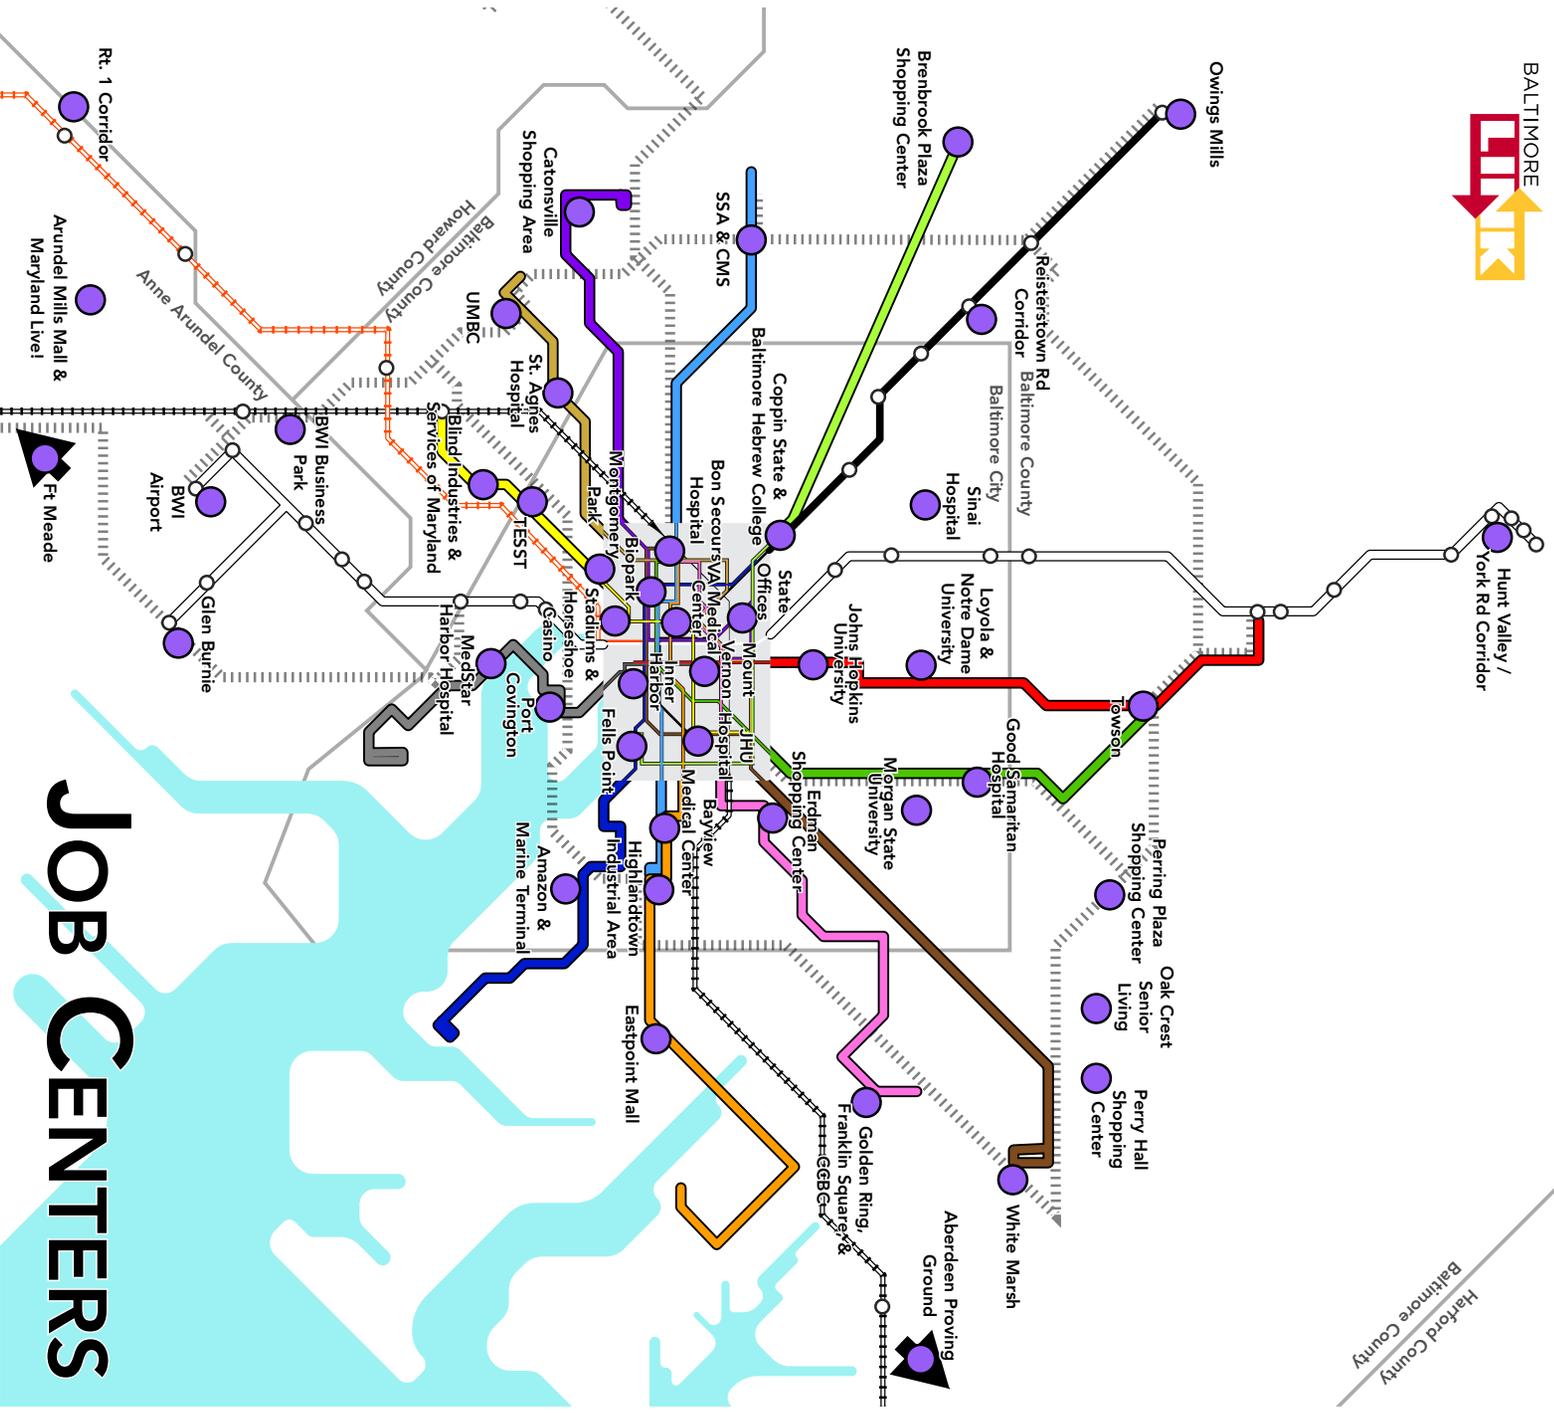

Fare Information
Displays fares specific to the type of route being served.

Light Rail Sunday Service Expansion

- By Summer 2018 MTA will increase the frequency of Light Rail Sunday service to align with the level of service on Saturdays.
- In conjunction with the BaltimoreLink bus service improvements, this additional Light Rail service will be needed to maintain the integrity of the transit network.
- Much of the region's workforce, especially workers in the service industry, depend on reliable and frequent weekend transit service to commute to their jobs.
- Improving the span and frequency of Sunday service will make the Light Rail easier to use and more convenient than ever.

	Current	Proposed
Frequency	 15 mins	 10 mins
Service starts	 11 AM	 6 AM
Service ends	 7 PM	 12 AM

The BaltimoreLink routes were named in a way that would make them easier for riders to understand.

- CityLinks are named after colors, much like many rapid transit systems.
- LocalLinks that provide crosstown service, or service that for the most part does not enter downtown Baltimore, are numbered from 20 to 50. These routes are numbered concentrically in order with lower numbers being closer to downtown and higher numbers being farther from downtown.
- LocalLinks that provide feeder service to CityLinks and crosstown LocalLinks are numbered from 50 to 99. These routes are numbered in clockwise order beginning from 12 o'clock, or roughly the York Road corridor.
- Express BusLinks are numbered from 100 to 110.
- For crosstown LocalLinks, feeder LocalLinks, and Express BusLinks, you will notice that not all possible numbers are routes yet; we left some numbers unassigned in case we ever want to add routes in the future.

You can use the table below to figure out which BaltimoreLink routes you might want to ride. Current MTA Local Bus routes are in the left column, and corresponding BaltimoreLink routes are to the right.
